City call Occupy vote 'betrayal'

Occupiers voted against moving from Dilworth Plaza despite City Hall's demand over renovation project ◗ Nutter says crime, health issues have turned encampment into problem ◗ Some claim willingness to relocate

▶ Some occupiers intimated yesterday that anarchists have become a voting bloc at the camp.

The relationship between Occupy Philly and the city reached its breaking point this weekend after the movement decided Friday to remain at Dilworth Plaza and city officials yesterday began calling into question the motives and safety of the encampment.

Managing Director Rich Negrin said that the group's decision to stay is "incredibly disappointing and, we think, indicative of something of a betrayal of their original beliefs and cause," adding that a "more radical element might be gaining control."

Many long-term members, however, claim some Occupiers are eager to move to accommodate a $50 million Dilworth Plaza renovation. But feeding the communication breakdown, Mayor Michael Nutter said yesterday that Occupy Philly has stopped talking with city officials.

"It's impossible to cooperate with someone who is not cooperating with you," Nutter said. And as far as Occupy's not-yet-crafted list of demands, Nutter said, "There are no negotiations because there is no communication."

Occupy Philly voted against regular meetings with city officials and did not respond to multiple e-mails or letters sent by the city in the past week and a half, Negrin said.

The city has no plans to remove the Occupiers by force, Negrin said — "We're Philadelphia. We're not Oakland." — but he is worried about the possibility of violence.

Many at the camp yesterday shared the administration's concern. Nutter said more officers are patrolling the site.

Member David Brouse says he was assaulted at the camp last week while videotaping a fight between two occupants. "We're feeding the homeless and military veterans, but not giving them their medicines," he said. "Thefts are rampant – everybody pretty much has stuff stolen."

Police: Rape in tent

Bolstering Mayor Nutter and some Occupiers' claims that the camp has become less safe, police said a woman was sexually assaulted Saturday night.

A 23-year-old woman was allegedly dragged into a tent by a 50-year-old man around 7:55 p.m. and assaulted, police said, though no charges have been filed yet. METRO/AW

Moral support

- Reverend Jesse Jackson made an unannounced stop at the Occupy Philly camp yesterday evening – noting he was "very impressed with the order of it" – and offered words of encouragement for protesters.
- "Be courageous, have faith, have hope and never surrender," said Jackson, who was in town for Joe Frazier's funeral. "You must stand tall."
- Jackson spoke as a crush of media and supporters encircled him, at times yelling, "We love, you, Reverend!" and suggesting he run for president.

Drexel uses scandal to educate

UNIVERSITY CITY. Some local colleges are taking steps to remind faculty and staff about the importance of reporting serious incidents in the wake of Penn State University's sex abuse scandal.

Drexel University is among the schools who have used the incident to remind administrators about their responsibility. The college has posted its policy about whistleblowing and a compliance hot line on its website and in an e-mail to faculty and staff that will go out this week. METRO/SDL

Two shot outside downtown hotel

CENTER CITY. Two men were injured in a shooting outside the Doubletree Hotel at Broad and Locust streets early yesterday morning.

Police responded around 12:40 a.m. to find one man, 19, propped up against the wall of the hotel with multiple gunshot and stab wounds. Officers found the second man, 18, nearby with a gunshot wound to the foot. He was hospitalized in stable condition. METRO/AW

Man killed in robbery

FISHTOWN. A man was killed after a robber fired six shots in his direction while fleeing.

The victim, 27, was walking on the 1300 block of Hewson Street with a woman, 27, around 12:30 a.m. when two white men approached them. Police said one of the robbers fired six times during the robbery, hitting the victim in the chest. He was taken to Temple and pronounced dead at 4:48 a.m. METRO/AW

Background

Tot's history

Toys for Tots started in 1947, when a group of U.S. Marine reservists got together and cleaned up small toys and gave them away to needy families. Now, it's one of the biggest nonprofits in the nation

Toys for Tots works by giving away the toys they collect to other nonprofits in the greater Philadelphia region.

Last year, they got 600 requests from charities to receive toys and have drop-off boxes set up throughout the city.

Philadelphia's generosity sparks Metro Magic

Christmas carols have begun inside malls, green and red lights have started popping up on some houses and generous Philadelphians have begun donating in earnest to our Metro Magic holiday gift drive.

By the middle of last week, dozens of Metro readers already clicked on the drive's logo at www.metro.us and picked out a gift that U.S. Marines from the local Toys for Tots charity will eventually pick up in December.

Staff Sgt. Ricky Wilson, who runs the Toys for Tots based in Folsom that collects gifts every holiday season for poor children in Delaware County and Philadelphia, will come to Metro's Center City office next month to collect what we're hoping will by then become a massive pile of hundreds of gifts.

Started last year by employees in Metro's New York City offices, Metro Magic was so successful it was expanded this year to the newspaper company's Philadelphia and Boston offices.

Quoted

"Toys for Tots is run by the Marines across the country. We [here] distribute to parts of Philadelphia and all of Delaware County."

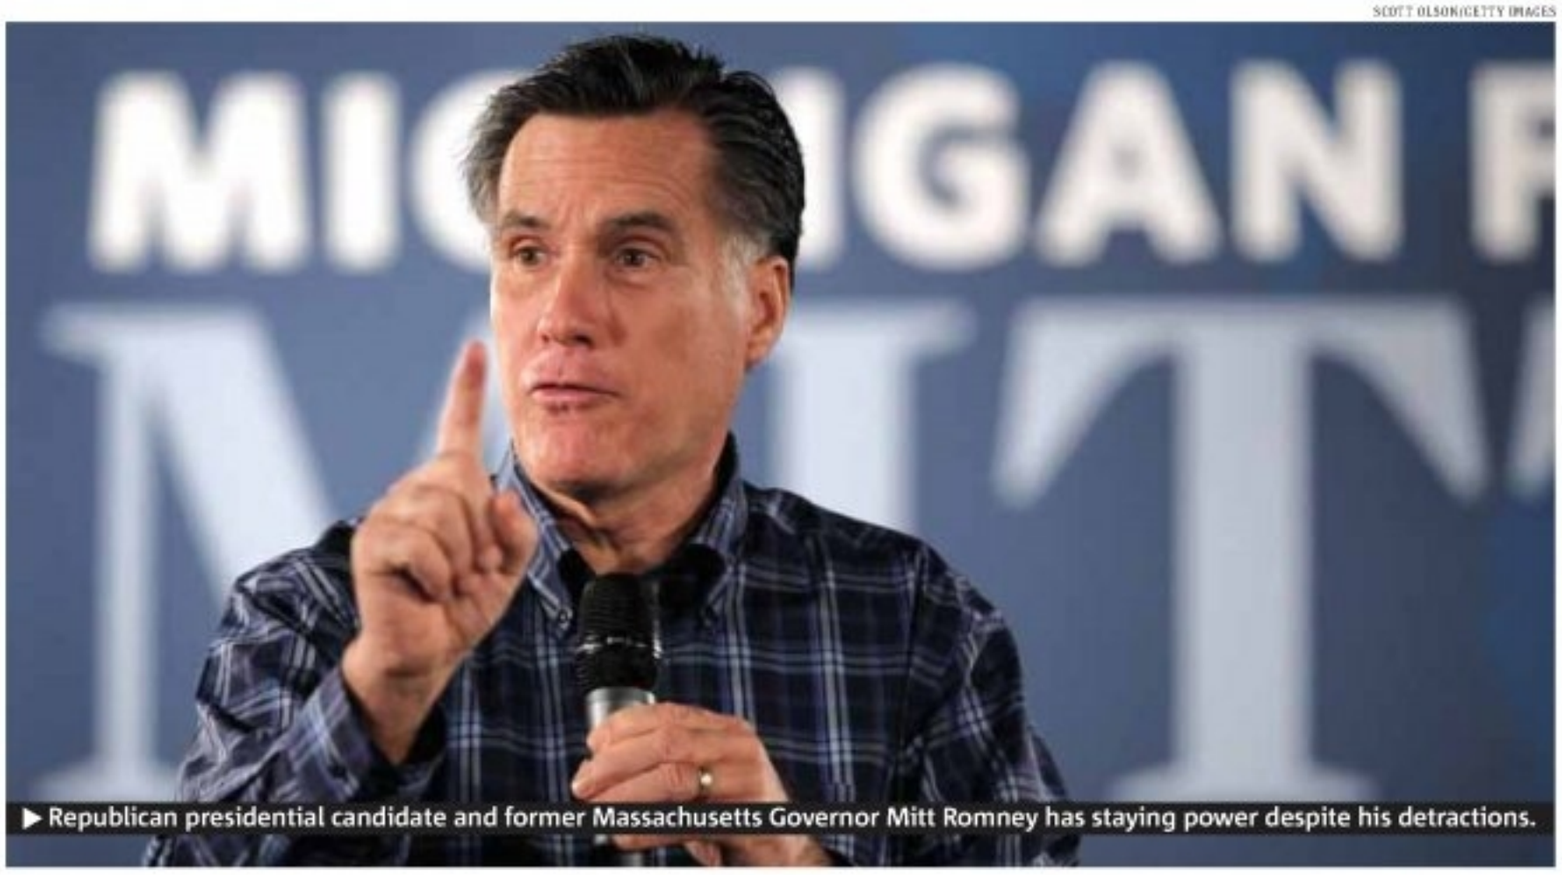
2012 elections: gop presidential race

For GOP, Romney No. 1

Love him or hate him, the lack of better candidates has placed Mitt at the top of the heap Something to be said for consistency: No gaffes

SCOTT OLSON/GETTY IMAGES



Republican presidential candidate and former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney has staying power despite his detractions.

Mitt Romney has a growing lead in the race for the 2012 Republican presidential nomination, and almost half of the party's voters expect him to be the nominee, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll.

Twenty-eight percent of Republicans backed the former Massachusetts governor, giving him a lead of eight percentage points over his nearest challenger Herman Cain in the poll, taken Nov. 10-11.

Romney was five percentage points ahead in a survey Nov. 7-8.

Newt Gingrich, the U.S. House of Representatives speaker in the mid-1990s, solidified a recent rise among conservatives seeking an alternative to the more moderate Romney, coming in third place in the current poll with 16 percent.

Gingrich, who is seen as having performed well in recent debates, was viewed as the second-most "presidential" of the Republican hopefuls, according to the poll.

Whether or not they support him, almost half of the Republicans surveyed expect Romney to become the nominee to oppose President Barack Obama, a Democrat, in the November 2012 election.

Romney, who also ran for president in 2008, has been in first or second place in polls for months and enjoys by far the most campaign funds of the Republican field.

But some in his party see him as too liberal, and he has so far failed to significantly boost his level of support in polls. The latest Reuters/Ipsos poll, however, shows he is benefiting from missteps by his rivals. REUTERS

He's got the look

When judged on his personal qualities, Romney was rated strongly by Republicans.

- Romney, the former head of the Bain Capital private equity firm, says his business experience gives him an advantage over other Republicans and Obama in the quest to create jobs for the sluggish U.S. economy.
- Far more voters see Romney as presidential than they do any of his rivals.

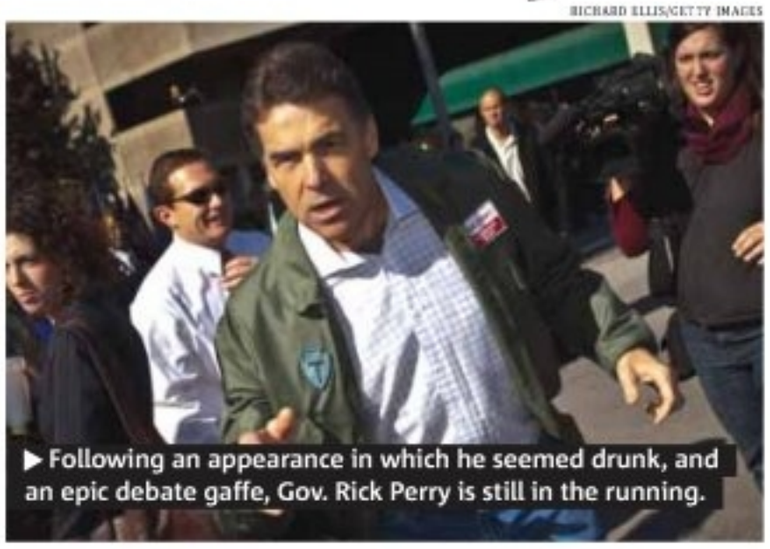
Poll: Perry down, but not out

RICHARD ELLIS/GETTY IMAGES



Following an appearance in which he seemed drunk, and an epic debate gaffe, Gov. Rick Perry is still in the running.

WASHINGTON. Republican presidential candidate Rick Perry's disastrous debate performance last week has hurt his campaign, but may not be fatal, a Reuters/Ipsos poll found.

After watching a video of the Texas governor stumbling while trying to name three government agencies he would eliminate if elected, 48 percent of registered Republicans thought less favorably of him, the poll found.

52% A plurality of voters — 52 percent — felt that Perry should stay in the race despite his debate performances.

But while 31 percent of Republicans believed Perry should drop out of the race, many more disagreed.

Perry's campaign went into damage control overdrive on Thursday, putting the governor front and center on news shows. REUTERS

Debate in brief

SOUTH CAROLINA. The Republican presidential candidates assembled in Spartanburg on Saturday night for a primary debate, the first to focus entirely on foreign policy and national security. In a diverse dialogue, the eight Republicans outlined the approaches they would take to diplomacy if elected head of state. Here are the five most notable exchanges. REUTERS

Torture

1 Is torture acceptable under any circumstances?

Herman Cain said he opposed torture but would "trust the judgment of our military leaders." Michele Bachmann said that she too "would be willing to use water boarding," which she called "very effective."

Ron Paul disavowed water boarding and torture, which he called "immoral," as did Jon Huntsman, who argued that torture lowers America's "standing."

Assassination

2 Is it OK for the U.S. government to assassinate Americans linked to terror groups?

Mitt Romney and Newt Gingrich defended the "targeted killing" of Anwar al-Awlaki, a U.S. citizen thought to be part of al-Qaeda. Romney said he "absolutely" supported the assassination. Gingrich argued al-Awlaki was "found guilty under review."

Paul dissented: "I don't think we should give up so easily on our rule of law."

Arab Spring

3 Pessimistic outlook on the Arab Spring

Cain suggested "all of the revolutions that are going on" have been "mishandled" by the Obama administration, and "as a result, they have gotten totally out of hand." Gingrich, meanwhile, worried that the Arab Spring "may become an anti-Christian Spring."

Foreign aid

4 Should we continue billions in foreign aid for Pakistan?

Rick Perry suggested that as president he would eliminate all foreign aid.

Bachmann sharply disagreed, saying that Pakistan is a special case because it's a nuclear power.

And Rick Santorum made a similar point: "We can't be indecisive about whether Pakistan is our friend. They must be our friend, and we must engage them as friends."

Withdrawal

5 Huntsman makes conservative case for leaving Afghanistan

"I think it's time to come home," Huntsman said. "I say this nation has achieved its key objectives in Afghanistan: We had free elections in 2004, we uprooted the Taliban, we have dismantled al-Qaeda, and we killed Osama bin Laden."

He went on: "This nation's future is how prepared we are to meet the 21st century's competitive challenges."

Electric vehicles at risk of fire?

WASHINGTON. U.S. auto-safety regulators are examining the safety of lithium-ion batteries that power all plug-in electric vehicles after a General Motors Co. Chevrolet Volt caught fire, people familiar with the probe said.

The regulators have asked automakers that sell or have plans to sell vehicles with lithium-ion batteries about the batteries' fire risk, four people familiar with the inquiry said.

The Volt caught fire while parked at a National Highway Traffic Safety Administration testing center in Wisconsin, three weeks after a side-impact crash test May 12, said an agency official. BLOOMBERG

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

▶ Although we're no longer laughing with him (and his twin sister), Adam Sandler is actually laughing all the way to the bank. "Jack and Jill" came in second at the box office this weekend.

What is going on with Adam Sandler?

Adam Sandler was once comedy's golden boy. Sure, he was never, ever highbrow — but his comedy was pretty funny. (Come on, like you don't know every lyric to "The Chanukah Song" or haven't seen such '90s comedy classics as "Billy Madison" or "Happy Gilmore" at least twice.) But it seems like in his bid to be a huge box-office draw, Sandler has sunk to the lowest depths of unfunny. In his latest, "Jack and Jill," he cross-dresses to play his own sister — and as we all know, once you start playing multiple versions of yourself, it's all downhill. Call it the Murphy Trajectory, if you will.

It's so bad that "Jack and Jill" debuted to a zero percent — later upped to 3 percent — rating on the critic aggregation website Rotten Tomatoes. Even duds "Yogi Bear" and "The Smurfs" have scored higher. So Metro has compiled the handful of films that scored even worse — zero percent and stayed there:

▶ 'Troll 2' (1990)
The cult classic, about a group of vegetarian monsters, is so bad it was the subject of a documentary called "Best Worst Movie" — directed by one of the cast members. Funniest part: There are no trolls in "Troll 2."

▶ 'Pinocchio' (2002)
Remember Roberto Begnigni? The "Life Is Beautiful" actor who won the Oscar and climbed over the chairs at the ceremony? He cast himself as Pinocchio in this live-action disaster. "What can one say about a balding 50-year-old actor playing an innocent boy carved from a log?" asked one critic.

▶ 'Superbabies: Baby Geniuses 2' (2004)
Talking babies battle bad guys with superpowers and farts. It's from the director of another critically acclaimed hit: "Porky's."

▶ 'Strange Wilderness' (2008) and 'Bucky Larson: Born to Be a Star' (2011)
One's a satire of nature documentaries, featuring Bigfoot, and the other is a satire of porn, featuring a small penis. Who executive produced these masterpieces? Adam Sandler.

Talking points

Lindsay Lohan is deluded

While Lindsay Lohan's career may be in tatters, she at least hasn't lost faith in herself, according to the National Enquirer. "She still sees herself as a player, and she's telling friends that her career is going better than ever. She's even talking about finding a role that will make her dream of winning an Oscar come true," a source says. To that end, she reportedly pulled some strings to attend the recent after-party for the film "J. Edgar," hoping to boost her prospects. "Lindsay tried to march up to Leo DiCaprio and Clint Eastwood to discuss collaborating with them on a future project," the source continues. "Their team held Lindsay at bay, but everyone at the party was horrified at her behavior."

Madge doesn't need lovers

Madonna puts a lot of thought into her boyfriends. "I don't necessarily like to use the word lover, because it sounds like they just come over and have sex with you. I aspire to more than that, and I need more than that," the singer, who is currently dating French breakdancer Brahim Zaibat, tells Harper's Bazaar. "It's also important that my children admire and respect this partner that I would choose for myself. Especially for my sons, who have their father, but they need a male role model as well. So I need to keep this in mind: What is this person modeling to my sons, what kind of man is he, what values does he have, what energy is he giving off? Because they are impressionable. It's so important."

Lohan

Pitt, Jolie head to Vietnam

After attending the Japanese premiere of "Moneyball," Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie packed up their brood and headed to Vietnam, according to The Associated Press. It was the famous couple's first visit to the city since they adopted 7-year-old son Pax there four years ago. The family was spotted dining out at a traditional Vietnamese restaurant in Ho Chi Minh City.

Stripping down at the First Person Festival

Have you had an awkward encounter with a funny, feisty New Yorker in the past? You just might be in 'Stripped Stories'

AKYA GARRETT

Giulia Rozzi, left, and Margot Leitman have a story for you.

The tales shared at a "Stripped Stories" session aren't necessarily sexy. In fact, very few of them are. They are all, however, about sex — and quite funny, provided you weren't in the room when they happened.

"Stories of people having a successful conquest don't work really well," explains Giulia Rozzi, who founded the popular storytelling night with her college friend Margot Leitman. "The football player getting the cheerleader doesn't work. But when the nerd gets the cheerleader, that works."

After four years of inviting their fellow New Yorkers to share bedroom — and kitchen and car and closet and desk — missteps and regrets, the duo are bringing their awkward sex showcase to Philly as part of the First Person Festival. For this edition, local storyteller and former phone-sex operator Kent Dwyer and writer Liz Spikol will provide accounts of strange encounters that could only happen here.

While the hosts aren't shy and seem almost immune to embarrassment, even Leitman admits there are some things she holds back on. "I realize that it's hard to share things while I'm in them. Comedy is tragedy plus time — when you're in something it's very, very difficult to be funny about it. But then, I have a few things, like this guy who broke my heart in high school — it's still not funny! It will never, ever be funny."

'Immortals' conquers the weekend with $32M opening

Fanboys returned to the movies in large numbers this weekend, giving "Immortals" a strong $32 million opening domestically.

That's $7 million more than Relativity Media had predicted for its R-rated swords-and-sandals epic, which is No. 1 at the weekend box office.

Sony's Adam Sandler comedy, "Jack and Jill," meanwhile, grossed an estimated $26 million. While that's on the high end of the studio's low expectations for the PG-rated movie, it does not compare well to the numbers most Adam Sandler films generate in opening weekend.

Still, it was enough to put "Jack and Jill" at No. 2 for the weekend, just ahead of DreamWorks Animation's "Puss in Boots."

That movie, in its third weekend of release, grossed an estimated $25.5 million.

The third movie in wide release this weekend, the Warner Bros. biopic "J. Edgar," is still searching for its audience. The R-rated movie with a stellar pedigree — it stars Leonardo DiCaprio and Armie Hammer, was directed by Clint Eastwood and written by Academy Award-winner Dustin Lance Black — opened at fifth place, taking in only $11.57 million.

Universal's "Tower Heist," the Ben Stiller-Eddie Murphy comedy, was No. 4 at the box office in its second week of release. It took an estimated $13.2 million — a 45 percent drop from last weekend. REUTERS

Zeus, the soap opera

The director of 'Immortals' doesn't worship the gods ◗ 'They were nasty f—ups,' says Tarsem Singh ◗ Why he wanted to kill off the stars of Greek mythology

Visionary Indian director Tarsem Singh is known for his bold visuals — as seen in his previous films "The Cell" and "The Fall" — so a fair amount of spectacle is to be expected for his take on Greek mythology, "Immortals." But the boldest visuals might be the gods themselves, portrayed here as fit, young specimens instead of the usual bearded old men. It's an approach Singh knew would be controversial — though he admits he wasn't prepared for just how much blowback he'd get. When Metro caught up with the outspoken auteur, he had a lot to say about his casting decisions.

Your Greek gods are a lot more fit in this movie than we're used to seeing.

"Immortals" is an action flick, and I decided it wasn't going to be CGI flying and fighting and pointing fingers and lightning coming out from people's fingers. Once I decided I wasn't going to go there, I needed physically fit specimens. So I just said OK, why would I go young with them? And I started to look for reasons, and the reason just being that if you wanted to live forever, nobody wants to look old and miserable and be carrying a catheter around in later-on years.

gods in "Clash of the Titans"?
"Clash" was unfortunately so hurried in competition, funnily enough, with us — just thinking that it had to come out before that. I said I had no interest in competing with a juggernaut that has three times my budget. If they want to turn something like that out, that's fine. But I don't know how to do gods turning cauldrons and going, "What are the humans up to?" That's so dated.

You also suggest in your film that these gods aren't necessarily all that immortal after all.
In the end, I wanted all gods dead. They're from a dead religion, but people were still like, "No! You can't kill off this one!" And

Drama club

Greek mythology is very soap opera-y.

Very! And for most people, they don't see it as that. They're just, "No no no! Zeus was this mighty guy, a voice of reason." The guy who got pissed off at everybody else and kept killing the wrong people? And then slept with so-and-so's daughter, so-and-so's son and everything? And then Poseidon coming down and impregnating people through water? It's just like, no they were nasty f—ups. And basically soap opera is the right thing.

I'm like, "Oh my God, people believe in this?" Just the concept of God I find boring, that everyone thinks of these beneficial bearded guys up there that are doing this nasty stuff.

Building Back Haiti More Justly

presented by
Mr. Mario Joseph

Mario Joseph, Haiti's most prominent human rights lawyer, has led the Bureau des Avocats Internationaux (BAI) in Port-au-Prince, Haiti since 1996 where he and the organization represent political prisoners and victims of political violence. Mr. Joseph spearheaded the prosecution of the Raboteau Massacre trial in 2000, one of the most significant human rights cases in the Western Hemisphere. He also has testified as an expert on Haitian criminal procedure before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights and in U.S. courts, and served on the Haitian government's Law Reform Commission. Under Joseph's leadership, the BAI has become a model for training lawyers to represent the poor in human rights cases. Since 2005, he has been a member of the governing Bureau of the International Association of Democratic Jurists.

Someone's gonna die!

TV's favorite time-traveling cop, Jason O'Mara, gives us the scoop on the season's dino-sized hit, 'Terra Nova'

FOX

▶ Jason O'Mara, right, stars in "Terra Nova" alongside Stephen Lang and some pretty scary dinosaurs. "Terra Nova" airs Mondays at 8 p.m. on Fox. Read the full interview online at www.metro.us/tv.

Irish actor Jason O'Mara is back on network television in "Terra Nova," Fox's massive, Steven Spielberg-produced sci-fi series about humans from a burned-out future colonizing the distant past in a parallel universe. In it, O'Mara stars as Jim Shannon, a cop and family man making a new life in a jungle overrun with dinosaurs. His last TV gig, "Life on Mars," was also about a time-traveling cop, coincidentally, but O'Mara insists he's not trying to make that his niche.

After "Life on Mars" and now this, are you already secretly thinking about your next time-travel role?

No. [Laughs] It was a fluke, really. I didn't do it because it was another cop traveling through time — I did it in spite of that. It's an exciting premise and I thought an exciting world, and the idea of a future civilization wrestling with a Cretaceous one was fascinating to me.

So what can you reveal about what's coming up for the rest of the season?

We just revealed a few things, like one of the beloved characters is going to be dying by the end of Season 1, and that a dinosaur would die by the end of Season 1, and that the season finale was going to be pretty ... explosive. You know, I got into trouble from a lot of people [for revealing those plotlines]. A lot of my Twitter followers were like, "Don't spoil it! What are you doing? You're killing us, we want to be surprised." Sometimes it's good to tease, but people don't like to be spoiled.

Given the long production time on this series, are you expecting an early notice if there will be a second season?

Well, yeah, everyone wants to be told early. But it's been quite difficult because Fox had the World Series this year. We were preempted in favor of baseball one week. Two weeks before that baseball ran over, so our show started 52 minutes late, which is never good. Even DVRs weren't able to cope with that. It's frustrating, but I think the cream always floats to the top — and if we're meant to have a second season, we'll get one.

Still smoking? Here's how to quit

The Great American Smokeout is this week Tips to stay off the pack

WWW.METRO.US/WELLBEING
ADD YOUR COMMENTS

According to the American Cancer Society, tobacco use is the single largest preventable cause of disease and premature death in the US, yet more than 46 million Americans still smoke. The ACS's 36th Great American Smokeout, taking place this Thursday, is a national movement encouraging smokers to stop.

"The battle has been won in awareness of the dangers," says Dr. Thomas J. Glynn, M.A., M.S., Ph.D., the ACS's director of cancer science, trends and international cancer control. "But most people think that's only [with regards to] lung cancer. There's more tobacco-caused heart disease than lung cancer. It also contributes to many other cancers, from esophageal to colorectal."

And still people smoke, because nicotine is tobacco's powerfully addictive drug — though it's not as harmful when independent of cigarettes, which is why nicotine patches and gums are used for quitting.

"[Nicotine] is unbelievably addictive," says Glynn. "It's not easy to quit. It takes the majority of people several attempts before they stop for good."

LINDA CLARKE
letters@metro.us

CORBIS/DCX

▶ In 2010, of the 69 percent of adult smokers surveyed who wanted to quit, only 6.2 percent of the more than half who tried succeeded, according to research released Thursday by the CDC.

Starting fresh

There's no shame in relapsing, only in giving up on giving up. Quit & Stay Quit Monday, part of the Monday Campaigns' efforts to help people lead healthier lives, encourages you recommit to quitting on a Monday if you've recently slipped.

"Monday is a behavior trigger," says Sid Lerner, Monday Campaigns chairman and founder. "Most people slip over the weekend, but why wait till New Year's to recommit to quitting smoking? Just requit on a Monday. If you stay quit every Monday, it's a start."

Dr. Glynn's cessation tips

1. Write down the reasons why you want to stop. Examine your motivation. Long-term quitters are motivated. If you slip, read them and remind yourself.
2. Rally support from family, friends and co-workers. And use counseling or a quitting hotline, such as 1-800-QUIT-NOW, or the ACS's 1-800-227-2345.
3. Use a substitute. Try to choose something healthy — munch on an apple rather than a candy bar. Most people put on five to eight pounds in weight when they quit smoking. That can be dealt with later.

What is urgent care, anyway?

FOR THIS WEEK'S TODAY IN MEDICINE CHART, VISIT WWW.HEALTH.METRO.US

The doctor will see you now

DR. MARK MELROSE
WWW.URGENTCAREMANHATTAN.COM

I am Dr. Mark Melrose, and my specialty is emergency medicine. An emergency physician is a jack-of-all-trades who can diagnose and initially treat almost any unanticipated illness or injury. We answer questions for people: "Is my chest pain a heart attack?" "Does my child have a strep infection?" "Do I need stitches for this cut?" Here in Metro, I will be available to answer your medical questions; shoot me an e-mail at askdrmark@metro.us. To kick things off, since I recently started caring for patients in my own urgent care medical office, many of my friends and patients who know me as an ER doctor have asked, "What is urgent care, anyway?"

BRAND X PICTURES

▶ Many urgent care centers are open on nights and weekends.

Urgent care centers are walk-in practices that are usually open seven days a week, with extended hours during evenings and weekends when doctors' offices are closed. When you have an unanticipated illness, injury or health care need that is beyond the scope or availability of a doctor's office (stitches, X-rays, UTIs, IV fluids for a stomach virus, colds, the flu, etc.), urgent care medical practices offer convenient, customer-oriented service. Unlike an ER, you don't have to compete for care with patients who've had heart attacks and trauma victims arriving in ambulances.

The physicians are usually specialists in emergency medicine, but may include family practitioners or internists. Patients may be referred to a specialist if they need a consultation, or back to a primary care doctor for ongoing care.

Visits are often covered by insurance; if you're paying cash, they start at about $150 for a basic evaluation and treatment. Charges are menu-driven for additional tests and procedures. All in all, they add up to only 20 to 30 percent of a visit to the ER. The time saved by not waiting in the ER or for a "try to fit you in" doctor appointment is well worth any out-of-pocket expense.

— Mark Melrose, DO, is a board-certified physician and partner at Urgent Care Manhattan. E-mail him your questions at askdrmark@metro.us.

Career advice from the 'Headhuntress'

The star of Bravo's new special knows what she's doing — and isn't afraid to tell others that they don't ◐ Wendy Doulton on how to stand out to a recruiter in any job market

A meeting with Wendy Doulton isn't easy to come by. As a headhunter for high-profile clients such as Amazon, Gap and Sony, she's responsible for finding the best talent to fill positions that command paychecks beginning in the six figures. Don't have the résumé to land that interview? She's also the founder of coaching service Katalyst Career Group, but be warned: She won't hold back when your skirt suit is too tight, and she doesn't like being bored.

Tonight, however, you can get a sneak peek of what Doulton's looking for in a Fortune 500 executive when her Bravo special, "The Headhuntress," premieres. While she's the perfect reality star — successful, intense and quick with sharp, British-accented one-liners — she was more than gracious when we asked her to share some of her core career advice.

Here's how to land on Doulton's radar — or at least avoid incurring the wrath of her tough love.

Quoted

"Pay very close attention to anything that affects your mood — positively or negatively — and let that inform you."
DOULTON

Know what you offer: Before looking for a job, spend some time evaluating yourself. "My foundational coaching is to know who you are and know what you bring to the party," says Doulton. "Pay very close attention to anything that affects your mood — positively or negatively — and let that inform you."

Interview your interviewer: Interviews go both ways. "The trick here isn't to answer the question right, it's to get the job that's right for you," she says. "It's like a date: 'Does he like me, does he like me?' Well, do you like him? Do you want to have coffee and breakfast with him every day of your life?"

Be positive: The poor job market makes headlines, but Doulton hasn't seen a dip in business. "I'm recruiting for companies all the time. Attitude is everything — if you want to sit around and say, 'There are no jobs out there,' you'll be right. People want to hire people they like, who are positive and energetic. For good people, there are always, always opportunities. The best barista, the best secretary, the best janitor or executive — there are jobs for these people. If you're working the system, eventually the system will work for you."

Insider tip

Don't get too used to getting advice from a recruiter. Fear of lawsuits prevent them from offering feedback after an interview.

"The parting line is that they're moving forward with other candidates. If they said, 'We didn't think you were energetic enough,' if it's something you can prove you can do or could learn, you could bring a lawsuit."

What you need to know about applying to college

Whether you're a student or are preparing to send a child off, you need to know the process Tips to get you started and navigate the financial aid process

As application deadlines loom ahead, students across the country are scrambling to better understand the college admissions process. Steve Cohen is here to help. The co-author of "Getting In: The Zinch Guide to College Admissions and Financial Aid in the Digital Age," Cohen has studied college admissions extensively over the last decade, and has taught at NYU and Fordham University.

How many schools should a student apply to?

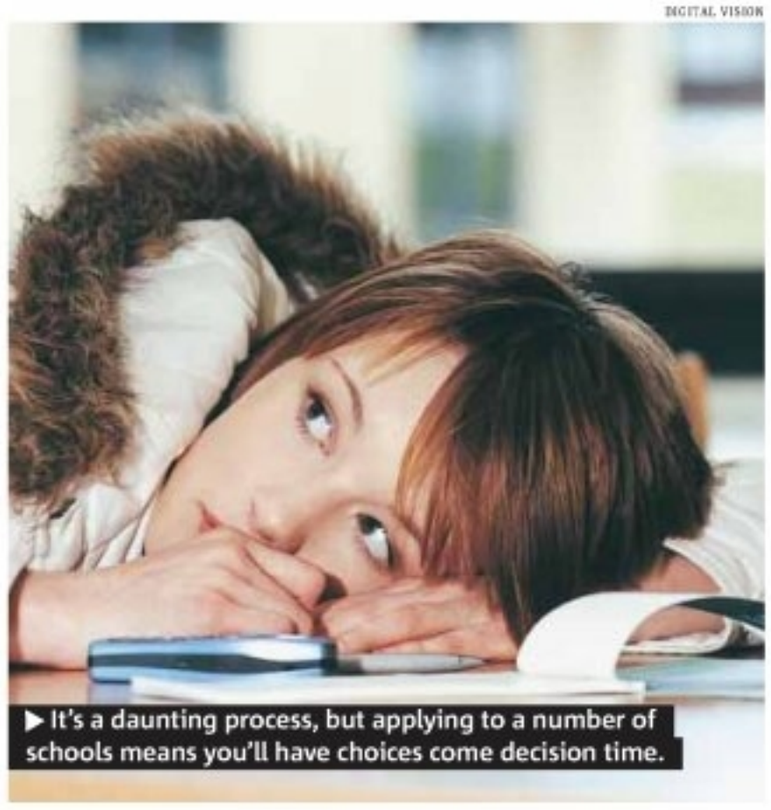
You should think about three different categories: "reach," "possible" and "safety" schools. The important thing is that you should be happy going to any of them. The number I usually recommend is three in each category.

Should you apply to schools you know you can't afford?

Here's the first thing to keep in mind: It costs less — in many cases — to go to an elite institution than to go to a state college. The sticker price may be off the charts, but the actual out-of-pocket that a kid and parent will pay is often significantly less. Wealthier schools have more money to give away in financial aid. And many elite institutions have made a commitment not to saddle the student with debt. They're more likely to give aid in the form of grants and scholarships. But you don't get money unless you ask for it. In most cases, it doesn't hurt to ask.

BRUCE WALSH
bruce.walsh@metro.us

DIGITAL VISION



▶ It's a daunting process, but applying to a number of schools means you'll have choices come decision time.

Other paths

What about students who know they need to attend a community college first?

It's important to remember that you still have options. It doesn't necessarily have to be in your hometown. The tuition is usually state-based. It may be tied directly to a smaller community, but even if you're paying out-of-state tuition at a community college, it is far, far less expensive than going to a four-year college.

When might it hurt to ask?

"Colleges fall into one of two categories. You can easily find it on their website. 'Need-blind' means admissions and financial aid are totally separate. The other is 'need-aware,' which means they might make decisions in part based on if you are asking for financial aid."

5 College majors that might not land you a job

We all hope to spend our lives doing what we love. Sometimes, though, what we love doesn't equal a paycheck. Last week, The Wall Street Journal published census data that shows which college majors could prove unhelpful for finding a job.

The unemployment rate for new graduates hovers around 9.1 percent. It's hard enough to land a job, but some majors could lead you to the unemployment line instead of the interview chair. Things are particularly gloomy for psychology majors. Take a look at the top five majors with the highest unemployment rate and the median incomes for those fields ... that is, if you find work.

1 Clinical psychology
Unemployment rate: 19.5 percent
Median income: $40,000

2 Miscellaneous fine arts
Unemployment rate: 16.2 percent
Median income: $40,000

3 U.S. history
Unemployment rate: 15.1 percent
Median income: $50,000

4 Library science
Unemployment rate: 15 percent
Median income: $36,000

5 Educational psychology
Unemployment rate: 10.9 percent
Median income: $35,000

Health care careers spotlight: Speech pathology

Speech pathologists help a wide range of patients communicate What's rewarding about the field

BARAMASTOCK

▶ Speech pathologists help others find their voices.

Ami Vandine spent 10 years as a graphic designer before making the switch to health care and enrolling in La Salle University's speech-language-hearing science program. Currently, she works on-site at five different locations, aiding children with learning disabilities such as autism and developmental difficulties. "Our goal is to give the child functional communication so he or she can communicate wants and needs in various routines — an ability that most of us take for granted," she says.

What made you decide to leave graphic design for speech pathology?

I was craving something that would make a difference in even just one person's life. Whether I helped an adult who suffered a stroke regain communication skills and remain an active participant in their community, or I helped a child with autism find an alternative means of communicating wants or needs — well then, I have lived a life of purpose.

What do you find most rewarding?

Giving a voice to those who don't have it. I love making a difference.

What aspect of your field do you wish people would be more aware of?

I often find that when I'm working with my patients, there tends to be a lack of awareness in the community of the various social, communicative, or cognitive disorders that are out there.

Bad teacher: When a professor doesn't play by the rules

Not everyone is surprised by corruption and cover-ups in higher ed Co-author of the just-released 'Professors Behaving Badly' on ethics and the university bubble

The scandal at Penn State was received with shock around the country. But at least three people were not so surprised. John M. Braxton, Eve Proper and Alan E. Bayer are the authors of "Professors Behaving Badly: Faculty Misconduct in Graduate Education," officially released by Johns Hopkins University Press last week.

"In my experience, administrators almost uniformly view their primary role as protecting the institution," says Bayer, who has studied faculty misconduct for more than two decades. "For them, the best interest of the university is to not let the information get out, even if it's in violation of the law. The structural constraints in higher education make it extremely difficult for a faculty member to bring their complaints publicly."

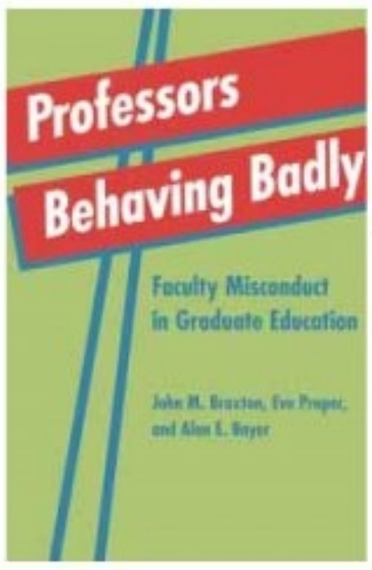
▶ Faculty members are often responsible for setting ethical standards — for better or for worse.

In 1999, Bayer and Proper focused on undergraduate education in "Faculty Misconduct in College Teaching." But a sequel was in the works almost from the beginning.

Their latest effort focuses on graduate-level education at major research institutions.

"Graduate education is where faculty have more intimate, one-on-one relationships with students — so there's much more opportunity to take advantage of students," says Bayer. "One of the major failures is that in most programs there are no courses that teach ethical responsibilities. So we leave it to individual faculty members to demonstrate through their behavior what the ethics should be. Often, students see unethical behavior and they think it's OK for them to do it."

BRUCE WALSH
bruce.walsh@metro.us



Misconduct toward students

Based on surveys of 793 tenured track or faculty professors, the authors of "Professors Behaving Badly" found five "very common" areas of faculty misconduct toward graduate-level students.

1 Disrespect of graduate students, including intimidation and humiliation in front of peers.

2 Misappropriation of work: Not giving proper credit to student research or authorship — or outright plagiarism of student work.

3 Sexual harassment.

4 Whistle-blowing suppression: Preventing a student from going public with illegal behavior within the institution.

5 Directive research malfeasance: Pressuring a student to alter research results in order to support a desired outcome.

Why Occupy? Debate rages

I Occupy because of the wars. I am here because of the prison-industrial complex. I am here because our economy is in decline for the bottom 99 percent. I am here because our federal government is corrupt to the core. I am here because our mainstream media is owned and operated by the same corporate powers that have bought our government. Our government and economic systems have failed us. It is time to reshuffle the stacked deck and fix it so government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall be restored.
DAN HIGGINS, VIA E-MAIL

I'm very concerned about how divided our country is right now. Some in the Occupy movement have said that they want a "fairer distribution of wealth." But what does that mean? You take money from people who've earned it and give it to others who haven't? It's better to make money the old-fashioned way by working hard than force the rich to give you a handout. But the divider-in-chief would rather stir up dissension and class hatred.
ROGER KELLER, VIA E-MAIL

After 40 years of regressive taxes, Repulicrats win and the federal beast is starved! Finally there's a policy that works. Now why don't you return the favor and starve the electoral beast? Allow no more votes — zero, nada — and see how that plays out!
SUZY SANDOR, VIA E-MAIL

Romney: Best of the worst?

The Republican strategy is similar to the overpriced gem scam. Surround the item you want to sell (Mitt Romney) with several of lesser quality (all the rest), and that placement should make the item you want to sell appear more attractive. However, in this case, the whole array is equally unattractive or flawed; therefore, it is proving difficult to distinguish the so-called "best" from all the rest.
GLENN HAYES, VIA E-MAIL

Gingrich: Not right enough

Newt Gingrich for president? Wasn't he the guy who pushed so hard for NAFTA, which sent so many jobs overseas? I'm afraid he's just another liberal posing as a conservative just as George W. Bush was portrayed. We need better representation in Washington, not just another media-promoted retread.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Consider the interests of your listeners before you bring up a subject that could easily bore them to death. If you want to be popular, keep conversations focused on them.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. If you're smart, you'll take care of all of your obligations first thing in the morning.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Don't let one small negative thought block all of your positive alternatives today. Generally speaking, there are two sides to every issue. Choose well.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Unless you are completely honest about your limitations, there is a strong likelihood you will take on far more than you can handle today and end up with a total meltdown.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Don't allow someone whose views oppose yours to coerce you into a debate today. This person wants to do so in hopes that you'll make a fool of yourself. Don't bite.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Early successes might spur you on, but take care not to overdo. You could run out of steam right in the middle of a huge undertaking.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Rarely do you hesitate to express your opinions, but if what you're thinking becomes emotional you had better keep your thoughts to yourself.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Unless you handle commercial involvements in a sound manner today, you could quickly lose control of good business practices and get in way over your head.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Be careful not to put yourself in a position of being at the mercy of individuals who have caused you discomfort in the past. You could be asking for a repeat performance.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Owing to certain responsibilities you failed to take care of when you should have, you may be faced with severe limitations today on handling a critical situation that now needs tending.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. If there is someone in a social get-together with whom you have a bone to pick, keep your discomfort to yourself. Any comments you make would put a damper on the entire group.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. The only way you will achieve all of your objectives today is to roll up your sleeves and keep your nose to the grindstone. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

CARDINALS 21, EAGLES 17 Up next: at NY Giants, Sunday, 8:20 Nov. 27: vs. New England

Not in the Cards, Eagles fading fast

Birds watch another fourth-quarter lead slip away on home field ◗ Reid sits Jackson for missing team meeting ◗ Players still sticking by their head coach

Sometimes, you have to pick your spots.

Unfortunately for the Eagles, Andy Reid might have picked the worst one.

With the season hanging in the balance, the Eagles coach decided to bench DeSean Jackson, after the receiver missed a special teams meeting. Jackson was inactive yesterday when the Eagles hosted Arizona at Lincoln Financial Field.

With one of the team's most dangerous weapons out of the game plan, the Eagles' offense looked out of sync, mired in quick sand, as Mike Vick turned in his worst performance of this nightmare season in a 21-17 loss.

"Honestly, it was tough," Vick said. "Playing without a guy you go to war with each and every week and you believe in, have confidence in and him not being there, it was a blow for everybody, not just me. Hopefully, he'll see that and understand that."

Maybe. But even if Jackson sees the error of his ways, it's probably too late for a team that once had Super Bowl aspirations. The Eagles would have to run the table — win seven straight games — just to finish at 10-6.

"We still have opportunities," Vick said. "Lord willing, maybe we can end up at 10-6. Who knows? Nobody believes it but us."

The players insist they're not giving up, not on the season or the coaching staff. In fact, almost everyone agreed with Reid's decision to bench Jackson.

"You tell me, if a guy doesn't do the same things everybody else is doing, then what would you do?," LeSean McCoy said. "Coach Reid is very fair with these things. DeSean will tell you that."

And, despite a 3-6 record, there doesn't seem to be any finger pointing. No lack of trust in the coaches to get it fixed.

"We're still with him [Reid]," McCoy said. "He's a fair coach, a good coach. We love him to death."

▶ How much do you blame Andy Reid for this one?

POST YOUR COMMENTS: WWW.METRO.US/SPORTS

MIKE GREGER
mgreger@metro.us

Three things we saw

1 Fifth amendment — For the fifth time this season, the Eagles entered the fourth quarter with a lead and couldn't hold it. The Cardinals outscored the Eagles 14-3 in the final frame and have been bested 60-23 in the fourth this year. The key play came when John Skelton hit Larry Fitzgerald on a 37-yard bomb that set up the game-winning score. Inexplicably, rookie Jaiquawn Jarrett was left alone to cover Fitzgerald on the play.

2 Feed the beast — LeSean McCoy came in as arguably the hottest running back in the NFL, but saw just 14 touches (for 81 yards) in this one. On a day when Mike Vick was very inaccurate (16-of-34, two picks), Reid wouldn't commit to the ground game and the Eagles got burned. In one critical stretch in the fourth quarter, the coach called nine straight pass plays.

▶ McCoy

3 Blame game — You can't blame the coaches for all the mental mistakes. The Eagles were called for 11 penalties (minus-97 yards), including two — a false start on Riley Cooper, illegal holding on LeSean McCoy — on what turned out to be the team's final drive with under two minutes remaining.

Tired of discolored toenails?

We want to see them.
Does part of your big toenail look yellow or brownish in color? It could be nail fungus.. Not only is toenail fungus unsightly and embarrassing, but it can spread - to your other toes, from foot to hand, or even to family members.
Right now, doctors at Paddington Research in Philadelphia are taking part in a medical research study of an investigational medication for nail fungus that may help. This medication is clear and applied directly to the nail. If you join, you will receive the nail medication and all study-related care at no cost. You will also be compensated for your time.

▶ Briere celebrates his first-period goal.

Flyers walk away with 3-2 victory

The Flyers rebounded from last week's 2-1 overtime loss to Tampa Bay with a 3-2 win last night over the Florida Panthers.

Danny Briere, Braydon Coburn and Matt Read lit the lamp for the Orange and Black, while Ilya Bryzgalov stopped 31 shots to record his fourth win in his last five starts.

"Whatever way it is, we'll take the win," team captain Chris Pronger said.

The eventual game-winning goal came off the stick of Read, who scored on a short-handed penalty shot to give the Flyers a 3-1 lead. Briere's goal came with 3:50 left in the first period, with Coburn redirecting a pass from Jakub Voracek at the 6:10 mark of the second. METRO

‘Generation Gadget’ gets their college car

- Hyundai Veloster capable of becoming new version of ’90s Honda Civic
- Cool enough for tech-hip kids, economical enough to cruise campus

▶ Sleek on the outside, the Veloster is digital on the inside.

GETTY IMAGES

Who doesn’t have fond memories of his first car? Maybe not your high-school, hand-me-down jalopy, but that first new vehicle you actually bought. The one without seat stains or mysterious rattles, and that had a little sex appeal.

In my college years, that car was most often the Honda Civic. Now it’s more likely to be a Hyundai or Kia.

Your daughter or son may already have an eye on the Hyundai Veloster. Take in the name: someone who has velocity — just this side of hip without pretension.

Prices starting at just over $18,000 don’t hurt.

At first glance it’s a two-door wagon, a burst of exaggerated, optimistic design. The long, narrow side windows capture the energy of the Nike swoop, the bulges around the wheels are exuberant. Hood intakes, creases around the nose, magnum-sized headlamps — the only thing the designers didn’t throw in was a kitchen sink.

It’s a mess, but a happy one, not unlike a college dorm room. The subtext? Good things happen inside here.

It won’t outrun a Porsche, but you probably don’t want your kid gunning down the street anyhow.

I suspect that most enticing to young buyers from Generation Gadget will be the electronics.

A seven-inch touchscreen is standard; it operates everything from the Bluetooth to the stereo, which is set up to control an iPod and even shows album covers. The optional navigation system includes a rearview camera.

At the end of my drive, I couldn’t help but feel a bit jealous. I had a Honda Civic in college and was inordinately proud of the six-CD changer I’d had installed. A car like the Veloster makes that 90s-era Civic look neolithic. BLOOMBERG

At a glance

- Price as tested: $22,550
- Speed: 0 to 60 mph in about 8 seconds
- Gas mileage per gallon: 29 city; 38 highway (automated)
- Best features: Eye-candy design; gadget-rich interior
- Worst feature: Relative noise, especially under hard acceleration
- Target buyer: College kids

News in brief

UAW says ‘misprint’ led to confusion

A United Auto Workers official who was quoted in a letter to members as saying that a U.S. official was “in the room” during labor contract negotiations with General Motors called the report a “misprint.”

The editor of a newsletter to members of UAW Local 598 erroneously wrote that a representative of the U.S., GM’s largest shareholder, was observing the talks, said Dana Rouse, a member of the Detroit union’s national bargaining team with the automaker.

“That was a misprint,” Rouse said. “I didn’t get to proofread it. It went out and then I said ‘Where did you get that from?’ I mean, I talked about us still being under government, but nothing as far as they were sitting there.”

The U.S., GM and union have maintained that the government is a hands-off shareholder that doesn’t interfere. BLOOMBERG

Ownership share of GM by the U.S. Treasury Department, which reportedly remained hands off during recent contract negotiations with UAW.

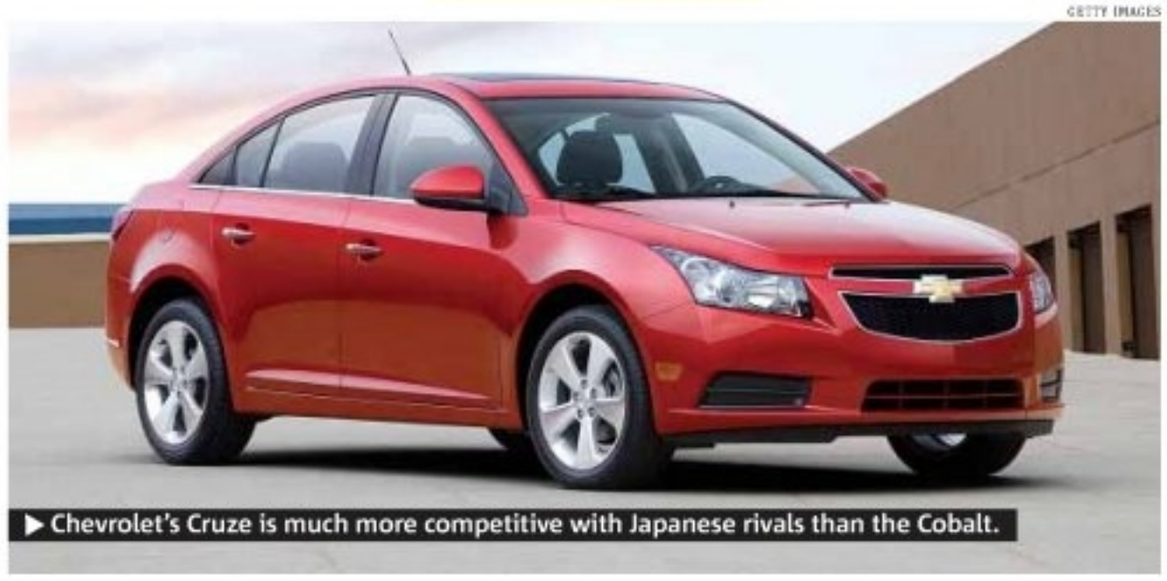
Chevy Cruze doesn't want to oversell itself

- Production of car that replaced sluggish-selling Chevy Cobalt began last year suspended for week
- Competitors' production beginning to rebound



GETTY IMAGES

▶ Chevrolet's Cruze is much more competitive with Japanese rivals than the Cobalt.

General Motors will suspend production at its factory that assembles Chevrolet Cruze compact cars for one week to avoid oversupply of the model as Japanese rivals' inventories rebound.

The Lordstown, Ohio, plant will stop output for the week of Nov. 28, Chris Lee, a spokesman for the Detroit-based automaker, said last week. United Auto Workers Local 1714, which represents the plant's hourly workers, cited competitors' inventories recovering from the March earthquake and tsunami in Japan as a reason for the shutdown in a message to members on its website.

Toyota and Honda factories are resuming output after the natural disaster in March disrupted supplies of parts and depleted inventories of models such as Corolla and Civic.

Cruze has outsold Honda's Civic this year through October and trails Toyota's Corolla by 1,316 deliveries.

"We don't want to overproduce," GM's Lee said. "Those days are gone from a GM standpoint. We're just keeping it in control and we'll ramp it back up and be prepared for a strong start after the first of the year."

GM added a third shift and 1,200 jobs at the Lordstown plant last year when production began for Cruze, which replaced the Chevrolet Cobalt. Through October last year, Cobalt sales trailed Corolla by 132,013 and Civic by 87,748, according to Woodcliff Lake, N.J.-based Autodata Corp.

Toyota is resuming plans to run overtime at its North American auto-assembly plants next week. BLOOMBERG

Auto bailouts debated by GOP

MICHIGAN. Republican presidential hopeful Mitt Romney defended his opposition to the 2009 auto industry bailout that helped revive General Motors and Chrysler in last week's GOP debate.

"It was the wrong way to go," he said, adding he preferred a structured bankruptcy. REUTERS
